ELEPHANT

THREATS

HUMAN-ELEPHANT CONFLICT

Crop-raiding elephants can cause loss of income, food and even lives. Farmers sometimes kill elephants to protect their family or income.

HABITAT LOSS

As the human population grows, more and more wildlife habitat is lost or fragmented.

POACHING

Around 20,000 African elephants are poached every year. Across their range, elephants are killed for their tusks, meat and skin.

ILLEGAL WILDLIFE TRADE

The last 10 years have seen a surge in illegal trade in elephant ivory and trafficking levels remain high.

OUR WORK

We're helping protect habitats and improve connections between fragmented areas where elephants live. We're working with governments and local communities to reduce conflict between people and elephants. And we're influencing policy and legislation to benefit elephant conservation. We're working with TRAFFIC, the wildlife trade monitoring network, to help train law enforcement agencies and lobby governments to improve laws on wildlife crime, including the illegal elephant trade.
